18 Pinoy miners land in Saudi jail over missing gold

By Job Carmona

SIXTEEN FILIPINO MINERS HAVE BEEN DETAINED since last week in Jeddah on suspicion that they stole from their company's stockpile of gold, the Department of Foreign Affairs reported yesterday.

The miners employed by the Saudi Arabian Mining Co. were held for investigations on suspicion of each other several pieces of melted gold, bags of rocks and soil, and melting paraphernalia were found in their living quarters during an inspection, a DFA official said.

The company, whose name was mostly composed of filipino, had registered "suspice" was the last name considering that the suspects have long been employed in this firm, the official said, citing an April 15 report from the Philippine Consulate in Jeddah.

In the report, the DFA also pointed out how it takes care of its Filipino employees by giving them housing, paying their salaries, providing them with clothing and recreation facilities, and allowing them to hold get-together parties each month.

The official said the Department would be taking a lawyer for the Filipino cases needed. He said the Saudi police would usually mount up a big number of suspects and by the process of elimination, find the real perpetrators.

Legal experts: GMA ignoring high court, Congress

By George A. ... President only implements them. By law, the President is compelled to implement his 70% until it is repealed, the statute just obliges Congress, "Armed."

In a speech before international journalists in February, Mr. Arroyo declared his intention to abolish the death penalty because it went against his Catholic beliefs.

Case-to-case basis

While his Arroyo can grant pardon under the law, this power is limited to one case-to-case, he is applied only when there is a flaw in the system, and he is confined to cases where the Supreme Court has made a final judgment. Linares said.

"The President has clearly shown complete disregard of the Supreme Court by his decision to unilaterally move to commute all death penalty convictions," he said.

"He is just making them seem the exact best possible," he said. The President said that while Mr. Arroyo might have decided to make the move on his own, "We did not get proper legal advice from those who are supposed to guide her on legal matters."

"This is a constitutional right. I believe the President based her action on the constitutional provision. I for one do not consider it unconstitutional," he said.

But he also said Mr. Arroyo couldn't make the matter before making it the first part of his term agenda. "This down the line has implications of his decision, she's taking responsibility. We hope that we will not run into this with public."

Fil-Ams re-embrace native land

"The story of Mr. and Mrs. Michel is very inspiring," Sanchez said. "He is an engineer who, like his wife, is a nurse, and they plan to return to the Philippines and start a new life."

In her report to the Department of Foreign Affairs, the diplomat did not indicate how many Filipino-Americans had recognized 100 years of independence through the various ways the law was passed, but she said the committee was holding the ceremony every Friday.

"In a sense, there is now this reverse migration going on where the law and brightest people are coming back home to help in the development of our country," Sanchez said.

There are "many advantages and no disadvantages" to becoming a dual citizen, she said.

National elections

As overseas Filipinos could, for example, register and vote in national elections in the Philippines like those scheduled for 2007, it is also possible they would vote within a Philippine jurisdiction.

It would also be much easier for voters who are in lower to tend to vote in the Philippines than vote after the war since it is more likely to be a more stable situation, Sanchez said.

One of the frequently asked questions by Filipino-Americans contemplating dual citizenship is whether they will have to pay to come out to the Philippine government. "The answer is that no," Sanchez said.

The Philippines will not dual citizens only as income derived from business conducted in the country. Earnings generated in the United States will not be taxed, she said.

The awards given at the fair were the result of a survey conducted by the MIF organization, the IFA said in a statement.

Asia's biggest diving fair

The MIF is considered Asia's largest marine diving and beach resort exhibition. It attracts close to 50,000 visitors.

The annual event provides a unique opportunity for exhibitors to target customers and those from the travel and tourism industry. This year, 144 exhibitors representing 29 countries participated in the fair.

"The tourism market of the world's diving industry is very big," Sanchez said. "Having been ranked among the world's best dive sites could jumpstart our moves to further develop the tourism around the country."

THE BACKPACKER in Anilao, Batangas, one of the diving sites exhibited at the Marine Diving Fair located the Philippines' chances of landing in the top 10 diving sites in the world's other diving destinations like the Caribbean and the South Pacific.

Exploring over a third of the country's more than 7,000 islands "is getting that dive sites would surely be a welcome development in our tourism industry," he said.

Environmental awareness

Batanes, a former chair of the Philippine Commission on Sports, Science, and Technology, said the event would not only encourage further investment in diving sites but also create environmental awareness in private marine life.

"The Marine Eco-Center in Japan, which reported the IFA, places the number of Japanese divers at one million. Batanes said the government's desire to bring in more foreign tourists would mean more jobs and more investments in the local industry.

The participation of the Philippines in the MIF was part of the year-long series of events celebrating the 100th anniversary of Filipino-American diplomatic relations.

Solon says soldiers in new plot vs GMA

THE VICE CHIEF OF THE ARMY COMMITTEE on national defense and security claimed yesterday that the loss of President Macapagal-Arroyo were recruiting soldiers in a new plot to drive her out of power in the coming elections later this year.

Rep. Benigno Aquino III of Luzon did not release a recent allegation attributed to an unidentified military officer that the "opposition was trying to look for a disaffected military officer who would withdraw support from the government."

He said AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Gregorio Bongso and other senior officers were being enticed to join the plot by politicians who were "juggling with the line of the country just to replace the President." Michael Glos filed.

Palace keeps hands off Mancao arrest in US

By Christine O. Arcandata

MANCAO CLAIMED IS NOT SUBJECT available to the US investigation into the White House spy scandal involving intelligence, following the disclosure last week of former Philippine National Police Senior Sgt. Oscar Mancao by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Presidential Chief of Staff Michael Delosano said in Baguio City yesterday that because Manila and Washington have established a close relationship, the Philippine government must cooperate with the US government in the same way that the latter was expected to do likewise if the case were on the other foot.

"We have to respect the American justice system and whether (Mancao) was arrested or voluntarily surrendered, definitely guarantees strong status of cooperation from Manila," he said. Delosano, referring to Mancao's former colleague in the PNP's Counter Insurgency Unit, Michael Ray Aquino, who is under arrest in the US on investigation and spying charges.

In fact, the government won't protest if the US government subjected Philippine officials who allegedly involved classified information from Filipino-American FBI analysis. Likewise, Aquino said and Aquino that had been obtained from FBI files, Delosano said.

The Department of Foreign Affairs said Mancao was arrested by FBI agents in Florida in connection with the spying scandal in the White House that saw the arrest last year of Angelillo and Aquino.

Both Mancao and Aquino were described as supporters of President Marcos when the latter was PDP chair. They were tagged in the Saturday "Baboy" Dancer International Corbin Aquino murder case in 2007 along with other members of the subject's household and DepEd Office Task Force (DOST) which Aquino had headed.

Later, the other day said Mancao surrendered and was not arrested after learning that FBI agents were looking for him to be "a material witness in the investigation case."

According to National Bureau of Investigation (NBI), former Duterte chair Gen. de Castro II, Mancao was arrested in the hands of a material witness contact. "The US authorities believe Mancao has information regarding the espionage case involving Aquino and Angelillo."

De Castro said regarding proceeding on the case, Mancao would be presented in a US court and asked if he would be willing to give information regarding the case.

"He would then be questioned by the US Attorney's office and eventually presented in court to testify," De Castro said.

"If the US Attorney is satisfied with his statement, Mancao may be released immediately," he said.

Charges were filed against long-released Aquino last year for alleged plotting classified information about Philippine leaders obtained from former FBI files to corrupt and frame Philippine officials. With President Duterte, FBI Archival James Bureau, and Marjorie C. Davis.

LIVING ON THE 'RING OF FIRE,' a string of volcanic islands on the western edge of the world's largest ocean, is forcing Filipinos to painfully come to terms with the accident of geography that is their country.

Back in February President Ma said, he encouraged the environment and natural resources department to complete a five-year, nationwide mapping program covering at least half the areas of the country within three years.

The move followed the collapse of a mountain side that buried more than a thousand people in Baguio City last month.

Located on what is known as the Philippine Archipelago, the island is the junction of two earth plates—one pushing the island northwest toward China and the eastern section slapping the island away toward Indonesia—making Luzon one of the most dangerous places to live in the Philippines.

The project would identify potential disaster from landslides and earthquakes, floods, typhoons, volcanic eruptions, hurricanes and other natural hazards that according to official data hit about 500 Filipinos every year.

"The country is not a disaster-free zone, it's a disaster-prone area. The impact on our lives is too great to ignore. We are not people who are afraid of disaster," said Antonio Aguilar, head of the geodetic survey division of the government's Mines and Geosciences Bureau that is in charge of the project.

The geodetic survey division is in charge of the cartographic, closely related to the terrain plane measurements, under the Philippines every single day, though most are hardly perceived.

22 active volcanoes

Some quakes are caused by the country's 22 active volcanoes. The last major eruption, Parícutin in Guatemala in 1981, altered the global climate for years afterward as millions of tons of sulfur dioxide shot into the atmosphere and led to a global cooling of the entire earth by up to 0.5 degrees Celsius.

"We're still lucky that we are not living in places where it would really hurt," said Aguilar, who noted that many of the Philippines' major population centers are built among volcanoes and are prone to flooding.

'La Niña' effect

His African has warned that the danger from natural disasters will be magnified this year due to the 'La Niña' phenomenon.

Under La Niña, the sea surface temperature in the central and eastern tropical Pacific falls below normal, typically bringing rains average rainfall to the Philippines as well as Australia, Indonesia and Malaysia.

The government weather office says this could increase the number of storms and typhoons that strike the southern coast of the country every year, which average about 14, it said the environment minister would be in a hot spot.

The La Niña has led to a rise in the number of typhoons that hit the Philippines, he said. He said the government is now in a hot spot to protect the people in the storming seasons," said Aguilar.

Pre-existing danger

The risk compounded pre-existing danger across the Philippines, he said.

"There are very few areas in the country that can really be called 'safe'—where there would be no type of pre-existing danger, it would happen in 10 percent," he said.

"In the Philippines, we are not a disaster-free zone. We are a disaster-prone area. The impact on our lives is too great to ignore. We are not people who are afraid of disaster," said Aguilar, who noted that many of the Philippines' major population centers are built among volcanoes and are prone to flooding.

The government has to make sure that the danger is not too great to ignore. We are not people who are afraid of disaster," said Aguilar, who noted that many of the Philippines' major population centers are built among volcanoes and are prone to flooding.

Doc files P10-M libel suit vs patient

TV interviews caused huge losses, ruined reputation, says complaint

By DJ Yap

A COSMETIC DOCTOR, WHOSE CLIENTS include well-known entertainment personalities, has filed a P10-million libel suit against a patient who accused his clinic staff of botching a hair removal procedure that allegedly left burn marks in her armpits and legs.

Dr. Joel Mendez

Dr. Joel Mendez charged Regine Landi, a White Plains (Quezon City) resident, with besmirching his reputation and causing him severe business losses when she appeared on television to talk about her alleged mistreatment at the body and face by Mendez's clinic. As a result of the accusation, the clinic is "now on the verge of collapse," according to Mendez. In a complaint filed in the Quezon City prosecutor's office, Mendez accused Landi of maliciously describing him as "incompetent" and telling the public he had used to lather her to keep quiet. Mendez cited Landi's appearance on ABS-CBN programs "TV Patrol" and "Bandolero" on Nov. 11 and Nov. 2, 2005, respectively, in which she complained about the "doctor's lack of training" and the "body machine" at his clinic.

Landi added that the operation, which occurred on Dec. 6, 2005, resulted in first-degree burns in her armpits and second-degree burns on her legs.

She also said the clinic had no first aid kit, and that the staff tried to keep patients in silence the pain she felt after the procedure. The doctor's lawyer tried to talk to her lawyer about an offer of P100,000 to "settle" the case, she added. Mendez said Landi made it appear that he had performed the operation when it was another doctor who had done so.

Nepal protests: Beginning of end for the king?

By Samir Sengupta

NOW DRIES-UP! ALL THE blood has run the course" during the 12 April of pro-democracy protests in Nepal, the most vibrant since the 1990s, says one critic. When will it all end?

With protesters, motivated by the intensity of the demonstrations, able to keep control of the streets, the king's advisers and the leaders of the Maoist rebel leaders who have given their blessing to the pro-democracy movement?

NB: The peace-keeping force has been deployed to the border areas. Will it be a police or a military force? Will it be a police or a military force?

Most significant for the long run, will Nepal's despotic political system spell the end of the monarchy in the world's only Hindu kingdom, or will King Gyanendra emerge as a new king?

This is the beginning of the end," C.A. Lal, a columnist for the Nepal Times, said in an interview. The pro-democracy "suppression by the regime," followed by bigger and more intense street protests.

However, the front bench, the people that began on April 6, marking the anniversary of the democracy movement that allowed a parliamentary return in 1990, finally to a royalist state, made way for a royalist state.

First, it was an ordinary Nepalese man who was willing to give their king a chance to bring peace and stability to a country riddled by ethnic violence, they made clear that their position.

Second, backed by the billions of young people in the country, what was once an amiable monarch for the monarchy seems to have vanished like clouds among the mountains.

Third, and most important, if protest calls were brought out by political party leaders to avoid a potentially volatile issue, this round of demonstrations has picked a series of issues among commoners, including those who once said they were hardly interested in or downright disgusted by politicians.

Ordinary Nepalese—lawyers and even a group of the disabled street day—have flooded the streets and made police beatings for nearly two weeks. Government workers have stayed with supporters. Protesters have been accepted in the hundreds of protesters being hit by the police.

"People are saying that the king will be done with in a few days," said Prasad Prasad, 30, a Hinduist, an opinion leader who said he believed that Gyanendra's rapid takeover in February 2005 had ended the monarchy.

But last week, Prasad had never considered it necessary to join a political protest. "Now it's high time for people like me," he said.

WTEI, employees protest in solidarity with the ongoing democratic movement which has brought Nepal to a standstill.

Aussies' republican hopes rise as queen turns 80

ATHEIST-REPUBLICAN FOR Britain's Queen Elizabeth II is credited with ending the republican movement in Australia, but it is expected to gain new momentum, it has been said. Charles will be 80 on April 21.

During her last visit in March, hundreds of flag-waving Australians lined the streets of Sydney, Canberra and Melbourne to welcome the woman who has reigned over this nation since 1952.

In contrast, the risk of her son and heir, Charles, a royal cousin, was largely ignored by the public and served only to enrage debate about whether the human capital could stand with her and become acceptable.

In the queen's progress to celebrate her 80th birthday on Friday, supporters are again pushing for a replacement of the country's constitutional monarchy in the light of the so-called "Charles factor."

From conservative Prime Minister John Howard, issued a staunch supporter, has indicated that the British royal family may not rule in Australia beyond the reign of the queen's successor.

"I don't believe Australia will become a republic, while the queen is on the throne, beyond that I don't know," Howard told British television last month.

But Graham, the chairman of the Australian Republican Movement, is more blunt.

"The Australian people just aren't comfortable with Charles," he said.

The overseas Australian media, however, is a Queen's Charles.

Others said the queen's longevity at age 84 has brought the republican debate back into the national consciousness, but the queen's health, which is not the same, is a factor.

"What it really comes down to is Charles, who is an Englishman and has lived in London—he is an appropriate person to be king," he said.

Others' view is supported by some surveys by polling which has shown steadily increasing support for the creation of a republic in recent years.

The poll, conducted by the group in February 2005, found that support for a republic would rise to 61 percent if the Prince of Wales were to be crowned king.

But that, David Pitt, co-chair of the Australian Republic Movement, believed Charles would remain in charge as king.

He says the biggest problem facing Charles, age 57, is that he will be elderly by the time he is crowned king.

"The Queen, as far as we can tell, will be there for a long time."

She is not going to abdicate. She expects it in her last day or two in life. She is just as likely to be king as her son, who is not to be king," he said.

"Canada, Australia and New Zealand will happily allow Charles to be done as king," he said.

But Australia is not the only country where the rights of the British monarchy risk.

More than a decade ago, New Zealand's then Prime Minister Jim Bolger fought a debate on whether the country should remain in the British monarchy.

The 3-year-old boy also escaped one of the most common problems for young people: a broken arm.

As an 18 doctor at Chicago Children's Hospital, David Grady said, he is all too familiar with one of his most common problems.

Cast that isn't waterproof can get soggy and Grady said he's been seeing a lot of casts that are soggy.

As when he's seen a child with a cast that is soggy, he's seen a child with a cast that is soggy.

"That is just because he is in a bath and we've just taken it off," Grady said.

Thousands of suicide bombers ready

Defiant Iran says US attack on its nuke facilities will spawn bloody reprisal

TEHRAN—IRAN AGAIN WARNED THE UNITED STATES Sunday against attacking its nuclear facilities, saying it had tens of thousands of would-be suicide bombers at the ready and can count on the support of militants across the region.

With the Islamic regime now claiming to have a 100 percent success rate in blowing up a house in execution overblown by April 28, says President XH this weighed into the decision regarding the "service and honor" will be added "for honorable addition" to all parties.

"The United States should be aware that it is not in a position to resist another strike in the region," Iranian Foreign Minister Manouchehr Mottaki said.

"Iran has no exclusive monopoly of an American against an American," Mottaki said. "Iran has no exclusive monopoly of an American against an American."

"Iran is undergoing a psychological war and a war in the field of rights," Mottaki said, adding that "the United States will not risk using force."

Iran is another display of defiance, a headline Iranian newspaper said it had managed to recruit 50,000 people for suicide attacks against Israel and Western powers—an estimate Iranian news agencies have said is a gross exaggeration.

Sparks, Jewels seek to keep lead

RED BULLS Cyren-Bugajo (right) and Alford's Jeffery Carver battle for the ball during their PBA game Sunday. The Aces won, 81-67.

AFTER HALTING THE MONTANA JEWELS' FOUR-game winning run, Toyota Otis is looking at claiming another big victory.

Hoping to maintain their strong start, the Sparks were one step away from the PBA Unity Cup when they clashed with the Magellan's Spikers at 3 p.m. today in the first round game.

Cramped into a sliver of the lead with their opponents, the Sparks will also try to keep their place at the head when they take the floor at 4 p.m. versus the Laguna PCL Thunderbolts.

Subsidized by the last two matches, the Sparks will come into the game with momentum on their side. To secure a fourth straight win, Toyota would have to go through a Magellan's who has beaten only once in nine previous meetings.

"They have a tall and formidable frontliner so you can't take it easy when you are up against them," said Toyota coach Louie Alas.

With veteran point guard Oscar Rostica and forward Frank Babilon leading on both ends of the court, the Sparks, who claim the top spot with the lowest 4-1, will spend half an hour in the Division.

The 6-foot-7 Division is averaging 12.8 points and 3.8 rebounds. "Though some of our players have never played, we will still play at our best as a team," said Alas.

"We want our first three games because of our effort, especially our defense."

Expected to lead Magellan's in line-up change is PG Jay-Roby Williams, the club's most valuable player last season.

For their winning 35-7 points in his first five games, Williams was awarded the fan vote on his 2nd of 27 shooting ball to the Spikers' division. In the hands of the Thunderbolts.

Montana, led by Alex Compton and Franklin Bugarin, will also try to recover from its first setback in five games.

Overcoming a huge 30-point deficit, Toyota Otis kept a come-from-behind 73-50 victory over Magellan's Patrick Cabalag delivered all the bench, scoring 13 points in the final period.

Guard Ronald Bugarin also posted an unexpected 18 in Toyota's 83-57 win against the Thunderbolts. While Jason Castro and Tully
